Meat and Poison
(A Shocking Crime)
Washington's Witch Broth
Why Not Keep Our Gold?
—By Arthur Brisbane—

ONE MAN'S POISON is another man's meat, the more deadly the poison, the richer the meat.

There was a brisk rally in Wall Street prices yesterday. Steel common rose three dollars a share. Steel preferred rose five dollars on news that wages of steel workers had again been reduced, this time by 15 per cent. When there is less for those that work, there is more for those that own stock certificates. However, lower wages are better than no job, and the steel company had no choice.

Stock prices rose generally and there was what business calls "a better feeling generally," when news came that the ways and means committee had voted against the soldiers' bonus 15 to 10.

This writer, subject to correction by the wise, believes that nothing could be better for big business and all business than to pay the soldiers their bonus now, since it must be paid eventually, with interest. The soldiers would put the two thousand million dollars in circulation promptly, in every part of the country, bills would be paid, clothes, automobiles bought, cheerfulness increased, and the government would save eight million dollars a year in interest charges.

The soldiers, and no other agency, could put the money in circulation and start a buying wave. The government, through the reconstruction committee, hands hundreds of millions to banks and other corporations. Do they put the money in circulation? Do they spend it, or do they hoard it? They sit on it, like old Father, on his rhinogold, hoarding it.

Refusal to pay soldiers, to whom government, rightly or wrongly, has promised the money, will cause much bitterness and establish a dissatisfaction, not easily cleared up.

The murderous attack on President Doumer, of the French Republic, inflicted upon the people of France a sorrow, shared by the whole world.

President Doumer, whose great popularity made it possible for him to defeat the powerful Briand for the presidency, is described by Lloyd George as "an attractive speaker, an able and experienced administrator of unblemished integrity, with an honorable career."

The loss of his sons in the war had endeared the President to the people of France. They looked upon him as typifying the finest qualities of the French race.

Many Americans, hearing that three bullets were fired into the excellent French president, by a Russian, will exclaim: "Those murderous Bolsheviks!" It happens, however, that this Russian, Paul Gogolov, is no Bolshevik, but a white Russian, praying for the return of the czar and the end of Stalin. The murderous fanatic boasts that he came to Paris from Monaco, to kill Doumer, because France refused to attack and drive out the Soviet government.

The wretched children in Metchin would seem to be a replica compared with the political cauldron boiling over in Washington.

Senator Norris, Republican, from Nebraska, says he will join Senator Huey Long, from New Orleans, and vote for Gov. Roosevelt, a Democrat. But there is a big "if" involved there.

Nebraska Republican voters like their radical Senator but while indoring him, they also indorse President Hoover.

The President sends to Congress a message of rebuke that delugates the Republicans and fills the Democrats with virtuous rage. The President tells Democrats they make no use of their power and in consequence the country is filled with "fear and alarm."

Senator Robinson, who leads Democrats in the Senate, says this, although he cannot show that Democrats have actually done anything except uprise plans.

Senator Reed says a Mussolini is needed at this time and millions of Americans have no signs of constructive activity in leadership, are inclined to agree with him.

However, you do not find a Mussolini among our type leaders—graduates of rural life offices or schools of trust company vice-presidents. Mussolini came up through REAL RADICALISM, through hardship, unconvertible, including imprisonment and hard work, and he is a common soldier in the trenches of the big war.

When he speaks Italians know it is the voice of a man who knows the people, who can need a bulldog, but you can't make it out of a white rabbit.

The most interesting invention of our depression is Goldborough bill, sweeping aside old "sound banking ideas," passed by the House by an overwhelming vote, 289 to 60.

Spoken of in some quarters as planned to "restore the gold standard."

'SHAKE-DOWN' IN COURT IS BARED

Bar and Police After a Racket in Which the Victims Are Mugged for Thousands

The Boston Bar Association and the state police have unearthed a huge "chisel racket" in which court attaches, crooked lawyers and their runners, in conspiracy, have extorted thousands of dollars from victims, mostly foreigners.

Grand jury proceedings which are aimed at smashing the racket are in immediate prospect, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The committee of the Boston Bar Association, headed with Frederick W. Mansfield and aided by Inspector Francis J. Fitzgerald, assigned to special duty, has gathered to gather loose ends of many "shake-down" cases, it was learned.

URGES STORES TO ACT

"What has been accomplished today by Houghton & Dutton could be accomplished by every store in Boston. It would be a splendid idea if all of the stores in the city could be brought together by the Chamber of Commerce to hold a great Boston sales week in every store in the city."

This could be done through newspaper advertising through-out New England. The sale at Houghton & Dutton's today convinces me of the value of the Boston Evening American as an advertising medium.

This sale also convinces me that the way to lead and hoodwink is not by promiscuousness, but by properly advertising value."

All France Mourns for Assassinated Chief

Paris, May 7 (AP)—Paul Doumer, beloved venerable 75-year-old President of France, lay in state in the green room of the presidential palace today, the victim of an assassin's gun, while France from east to west bowed in address and in horror.

After lingering throughout the night in a coma and delirium, while a staff of physicians worked vainly to save his life, M. Doumer died at 3:37 a. m., just as the first light of dawn crept over the cold stone walls of Beaulieu Hospital, where he was taken after the tragic shooting yesterday.

When the end came the entire French Cabinet was assembled in a room at the hospital next to that occupied by M. Doumer. At his bedside were his wife, his two daughters, Madames Eymery and Fournier, and several of his physicians.

CLOSED BANK FACTS TO BE ASKED OF GOVERNOR

Formal "Invitation" to Appear in the Investigation Sent to State's Chief Executive Suffolk County grand jury investigating the affairs of the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co. sent an invitation to Gov. Ely today, it is understood, to appear before them and give any information he may have regarding the bank.

It was reported that the calling of Miss Mary Welch, a stenographer in the office of William M. Fendle, clerk of the Superior Criminal Court, into the grand jury room today was for the purpose of sending this invitation.

CONFERENCES WITH GOV. Ely, it is understood, had several conferences with Bank Commissioner Guy in connection with the Industrial Bank & Trust Co., which closed in March, 1931.

Commissioner Guy has been before the grand jury several times to give information regarding the institution, and another witness has been Frank J. Donahue, chairman of the Democratic state committee, and recently appointed a judge of the Superior Court. Donahue at one time was counsel for the bank.

McKNIGHT PARTNER HEARD Judge Roscoe Walworth of Chelsea district court was a witness before the grand jury again today.

Another witness was John E. Eaton, law partner of Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Bedford Trust Co.

Judge Walworth was induced by officials of the bank to become for a time an officer of Starwood Shares, Inc., a holding company. He held the position only a short time.

When the grand jury finished their work this afternoon, Miss Welch was called in.

DOUGHER MOURN AT HOSPITAL AS DOUGHER DIES

DEATH COMES TO PRESIDENT IN COMA

arrived at the hospital, and this was taken as an indication that Mr. Doumer's condition had taken a grave turn. A minute later the physicians issued a bulletin saying his condition was becoming more and more grave. "Cerebral symptoms are arising," the bulletin said, "and the basis at the base of the cranium is becoming more marked."

A short time later the procurator-general, a number of police officers and Dr. Paul Gorgulov, chief of the staff, arrived at the hospital, and this was considered by the waiting crowd to mean that the end was near. A male nurse, leaving the room, said that some time before midnight Mr. Doumer had expressed astonishment at finding himself in a hospital bed and he was told:

"You have had an automobile accident."

At 3:45 a. m. Pierre Cathala, one of the cabinet under-secretaries, announced that the President had passed into a coma and had suffered a period of delirium. His pulse had grown imperceptible and his breathing was spasmodic. Hope was given up.

Makes Pathetic Effort to Bid Family Good-by

At 4:15 the cabinet assembled in the room next to that in which Mr. Doumer lay. A few minutes later the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies arrived.

A few minutes before 5 p. m. Doumer came out of the coma and recognized his family. He made a pathetic effort to bid them farewell, but was unable to speak and his body exhausted. A moment later he was dead.

The body was taken immediately to the Elysee Palace, where it was placed in the green saloon, where the French people would have their

Merchants Fear Consequences of Conviction of Massie Case Defendants

Honolulu, May 7 (AP)—A breach between the United States Navy and civilian Honolulu widened today, with merchants apprehensive of a threatened boycott by the naval personnel.

The rift, first caused by the Massie assault case in September and the martial of the native charges with the attack, spread steadily and had its latest impetus in the conviction a week ago of the four defendants in the Fortiess-Massie murder case. They are Mrs. Grace Fortiess, an ex-convict, and her husband, Thomas Massie; Albert O. Jones and E. L. Lord, naval enlisted men.

The four, who subsequently obtained a commutation of sentence, were convicted of the revenge slaying of John Robert Ruggles, an ex-convict, who was shot by the four on the night of May 1, 1931.

Paris Reds' Organ Sees Possible War

Paris, May 7 (AP)—The circulation of the newspaper L'Humanite, organ of the French Communist party, almost doubled today because of interest in its attitude on the assassination of President Doumer.

From the assassination at Sarajevo in 1914, the leading editorial of L'Humanite said, "The World War came. From this assassination in Paris there may come a war against the world."

Brussels, May 7 (INR)—Newspapers of the Right to-day express opinion the assassination of the President of France was actually an agent of Monarchy and not a "White Russian."

Service used the Fascist party only as a blind for the assassin, according to the Right press, which foresees a systematic attempt to create trouble.

From the age of 13 he was the sole support of a widowed mother and in the history of French politics he was one of the most brilliant and energetic of men.

"It is indeed tragic that so different a French patriot should suffer death at the hands of an assassin."

In Madame Doumer and the city of France that people of the city of Boston extend a most ardent tribute of their sympathy and condolence.

Hoover Cables Regret Over Death of Doumer

Washington, May 7 (INR)—President Hoover today cabled expressions of regret to Premier Andre Tardieu of France over the death of President Doumer, who was assassinated yesterday.

The message said: "I am grieved beyond expression to learn of the death of President Doumer. The great grief of France is shared by all the United States and my fellow countrymen join with me in expressing their sympathy to the family of President Doumer. Mrs. Hoover and my own heartfelt condolences in their bereavement."

Two Chances workers were seriously injured in separate accidents today.

Andrew Marlow, 26, of 46 Walnut st., suffered a fractured skull when he plunged two stories down an elevator shaft at the Standard Oil Co. in Detroit.

Edward Hurlbut, 19, of 37 Broadway st., suffered a fractured spine and a possible fracture of the ribs when he fell from the top of a press in the Leather Co. at 303 Second st. Both victims are at Chelsea Memorial Hospital.

YOUNG MAN ITS BARBON DEAL FOR TROLLEY

Lieutenant-Governor Hopes Economist and Family Hope to Profit From B. W. Sale

Lieut.-Gov. Youngman, renewing his attack on the proposed $565,000 purchase of the Boston & Worcester trolley franchise by the State, issued a statement today assailing Roger W. Babson of Wellesley, economist.

Youngman names the Babson family as owners of large blocks of the stock of the street railway company.

"I have received a copy of a circular sent in behalf of Roger W. Babson to secure names for a petition to the Legislature in an attempt to block relief for the people in the Boston & Worcester trolley franchise," said the Lieutenant-Governor.

"This circular sets forth that Mr. Babson's only interest in the case is in a general and affecting Massachusetts public utility."

"He is not a public utility," said the Lieutenant-Governor.

JOAN CRAWFORD 500 LOSE AUTO LICENSES

Hollywood, May 7 (INS)—Quick thinking by Joan Crawford, beautiful young screen star and wife of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in help police trap an alleged extortionist, Dist. Atty. Burton Pitts revealed today.

Pitts and detectives declined to give the name of the man under arrest in the mysterious extortion plot, but said he came here recently from Washington, D. C.

The suspect was trapped by police, who were notified by Miss Crawford that she had an appointment at the studio with the "kiddie party man."

A telephone recorded Miss Crawford's conversation with the suspect, after which police walked in and arrested him late yesterday.

"It is difficult to tell just what the man wanted," Pitts said. "The dictaphone record is indistinct, but the fellow apparently is a crack over getting into pictures, and attempted to force Miss Crawford to help him."

Miss Crawford's husband is on a yachting cruise off the coast of Mexico.

'Girl-Who-Never-Went-to-School' Gets Clue to Her Kin

MEETS TWO SHE THINKS ARE HER SISTERS

Life Story of a Strange Child Found After Supposed Mother's Death Begins to Unfold

The strange life story of Louise Bradley, "the girl who never went to school," slowly started to unfold today.

Half doubting, but joyful nevertheless, the 21-year-old girl greeted a man she believes her grandfather and two young women she believes her aunts.

The touching "reunions" took place at the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, where Louise was taken after the death of her supposed mother, Mrs. Edith Rice Bradley of the South End.

In a dingy room that was virtually a prison for the young girl, the woman of mystery died of natural causes. The body was found by the girl.

IDENTIFIES MRS. BRADLEY
William Rice, an Oakland farmer, embraced the girl today. He said she might be his granddaughter. But he recalled that his daughter, the Mrs. Bradley who died, had been estranged from her husband for 18 years or more.

Rice identified the body at Southern Mortuary as his daughter, Edith Rice, who married a former member of the Worcester fire department, whose whereabouts are now unknown.

"I haven't got enough money to bury her but I'll get enough somewhere," he told officials at the morgue. Then he wended his way to the children's society to see the girl.

"My daughter was at one time a nurse," he told workers there. "I don't know when the child was born nor where. I don't know whether the birth was ever recorded."

SAW HER 8 YEARS AGO
He could furnish no information that was helpful, although he said he saw the child about eight years ago. "But asked no questions," Geraldine and Ernestine Bradley, the latter now Mrs. George Brewer, moved to Winchendon with Mrs. Bradley in 1917, records there showed today. They are now 21 and 20, respectively.

They still live there, having lived with their grandmother, the wife of an Oakland farmer, until she died in April, 1920.

The children were taken into the Rice home when the mother disappeared in 1918. Police Chief Robert Callahan revealed today. The girls grew to young womanhood and led quiet lives, Chief Callahan said.

STILL 'GIRL OF MYSTERY'
"Mother used to write to us but not for the past six years," they said. No mention of Louise was ever made, they added.

"But don't you think she resembles us?" interrupted Geraldine.

The Winchendon visitors affectionately embraced "the girl who never went to school." They said they hoped records would prove her sister. But there was another obstacle. No birth record has ever been found. Officially, Louise is still a girl of mystery.

HUNT IN BANKS FOR $100,000

Washington, May 7 (AP)—Justice Department investigators today began a search of safety deposit boxes here in an effort to find the $100,000 Gaston R. Means is charged with obtaining to bring about the return of the Lindbergh baby.

Meanwhile, the former Department of Justice agent whiled away the time at the District of Columbia jail by reading newspapers and talking with other prisoners. He did not seem worried.

If a federal grand jury indicts him Tuesday for larceny after trust in connection with the receipt of the money from Mrs. Edward R. McLean, wife of the Washington Post publisher, he expects to be released from jail on $100,000 bond. It was understood arrangements had been completed for making bond.

The investigation of deposit boxes was begun after a search of Means's fashionable home in Chevy Chase proved fruitless. Officials also are contemplating a search of his brother's home at Concord, N. C.

600 to Lose Work in City Departments

Indications are that the money appropriated to cover expenses of the soldiers' relief department will have been expended by July 1. Soldiers' Relief Commissioner Lyden informed Mayor Curley today. Layoffs in the transit department and the public works department will throw more than 600 men out of work within the next week. Lyden informed the mayor, and at least 90 per cent of those affected will apply for relief from his department, involving a monthly expenditure of $23,000.

NAUGHTY B. U. FRAT OUT OF BROOKLINE

Boys in an Ice Truck Give the Noise Complainant a Lot of Bronx Cheers and Go

That raucous sound variously known as "the bird," "the raspberry" and "the Bronx cheer," echoed through fashionable Mason ter, Brookline, today.

It was heard as early—or as late as 2 a. m., and it continued through the morning.

It was, after a fashion, the valedictory, the requiem, the threnody of the departure, for other parts of the members of the Phi chapter, Beta Kappa fraternity of Boston University.

They moved to a new site in Bay State st., at a street of the pretense of neighbors, who objected to "the bird" and the town's bill in equity seeking to oust them. They hired an ice truck and carried their belongings away and they sounded a chorus of Bronx cheers for Joseph Gillespie, the petitioner protesting against their presence. It was a peculiarly pretty or entertaining, or even naughty and childish.

U. S. SURPRISES ENGLISH EDITOR

It took a visit to the United States to dispel for John Walter, famous London editor, the legend that it is "a gangsterous country."

Walter, who is chief proprietor of the London Times, confessed himself amazed by the wildness of the European reports when faced with reality of American life. A tall, middle-aged man with a light mustache, and bearing the unmistakable imprint of Oxford, it is his first trip to this country in 20 years. He was guest of honor at a Harvard Club luncheon at noon and is staying at the Copple Place.

"Europe loves to feature gangster stories about your country to the exclusion of other news. I can see, when here myself—on the spot, as you might say—that it's only one factor," he said.

"There are many differences, of course. Your press is so much more personal than ours. We always give news of world importance the first place. Maybe the English reader is more international minded. It's closer to world affairs."

"I was extremely sorry to hear of the death of President Hoover this morning. It is certainly a great tragedy for France. I don't think that another World War is likely to result this time. Still, you never can tell."

"I like Boston. In common with most other Englishmen who have had the good fortune to visit here, I find I feel more at home than in any other part of the States."

With the Candid Camera

By CANDID CAMERA

The snappy photographer who is swinging his camera these days didn't have the credentials to crash the state convention of the Knights of Pythias. So they halted the session until we got pictures. The two-day convention ended yesterday.

Waiting business for a moment the man with the gavel, Robert A. Burgess, the outgoing grand chancellor, was my first camera subject for the event.

As the convention closes, the reins of power are taken over by the Rev. Dr. Charles J. Smith. He was elected grand chancellor. Rev. Mr. Smith is pastor of the First Baptist Church in Hyde Park.

It was luncheon hour when I came across the Rev. Mont M. Thornburgh, of Malden. He is the grand priest of the Bay State Pythian branch.

He just looks like a man whom you'd trust with all your secrets and confidences. That's what the Pythians think, for George E. Howe, of Stoneham, grand leader of records and rolls.

HANGS HIMSELF UNDER BRIDGE

An unidentified man about 50 years old today hung himself under Dover at bridge, attaching a piece of wire to one of the rods.

A worker, who saw the body dangling in space, notified police and the body was cut down by Patrolman John Nickerson and William Fox of the East Dedham station.

The body was dressed in a light gray suit. The man had mixed gray hair, weighed 140 pounds and was five feet five inches tall.

Dr. English Is Busy; Delays Oath-Taking

Because 200 child patients had to be attended today, Dr. Martin J. English, family physician, Mayor Curley, was forced to postpone until Monday his taking of the oath at trustee of Boston City Hospital.

When Dr. English failed to appear before City Clerk David, newspapermen caught him out and found him busy with his young charges at the hospital, with which he has been associated since he began his practice medicine.

CLARKE MOTHER PINS MURDER ON FLIER

Miami, Fla., May 7 (INS)—Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, mother of Hadden Clarke, today announced she had asked State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne to resume the slain writer's body, following information indicating he was beaten over the head before a bullet was put through his brain.

She also declared that Capt. W. N. Lancaster, former British flier, held on a first degree murder warrant in connection with Clarke's death, had told her three days after her son's death:

"Sometimes I think I did kill Hadden."

Clarke, who is professor of journalism in the University of Miami, made these declarations today in her apartment in a Miami hotel.

She said Capt. Lancaster, released from questioning by state and federal officers April 24, three days after Clarke died, visited her apartment with Mrs. Jessie Keith-Miller, Lancaster's associate in aviation and Clarke's fiancée. It was at the Keith-Miller home where all three lived, that Clarke was shot.

"Mrs. Clarke, I want you to say you knew I did not kill your son," Capt. Lancaster told her. "Mrs. Clarke said today, 'I told him that I hope I may be able to say that some day, captain, but now I don't know whether you killed Hadden or not. The circumstances are very strong.'"

BUMPS ON HIS HEAD

Mrs. Clarke's wish that the body of her son be disinterred and an examination made, she was based on information she had received from Dr. Carleton Deeders, the physician who attended her boy from the time he was found shot at 3 a. m. April 21, until he died eight hours later.

Dr. Deeders told me that in accordance with medical custom he shaved the wound in the right temple to diminish the danger of infection," said Mrs. Clarke, "in shaving the head he disclosed three bumps behind the right ear that had nothing to do with the wound."

"In answer to a question, he said they might have been made with a pistol butt."

Cal, in Calm 'Back Home,' Eyes Political Scene

Plymouth, Vt., May 7—Calvin Coolidge intends to pass most of the summer in this serene mountain village, where he was born, where he became President and which was largely the scene of his successful campaign for re-election.

He has come back home to the place of his boyhood gambols and will be here while the two great political parties are in the throes of nominating their candidates for President and the whirlwind campaign to follow.

He will be an interested but non-participating observer.

The frame dwelling occupied by the Coolidge family so long had with modern fixtures, and is being enlarged to meet the comfort of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and the few guests they may accommodate.

Coolidge, like the ancient Egyptian, is supervising every claspboard rap of the hammer.

He is likewise disposing of much routine work as may require his personal secretary, who will be stationed to what will be an office and reading room now being added to the old home.

Coolidge likes the place, with its familiar surroundings.

DRAFT GENERAL CROWDER DEAD

Washington, May 7 (AP)—A long illness, ending in pneumonia, resulted in the death today of Maj.-Gen. Brock Crowder, 73, soldier-diplomat, in Walter Reed hospital.

He was the first American ambassador to Cuba. One of his outstanding acts as a military man was the formulation and supervision of the system of selective draft in the World War, which sent to the front millions of American soldiers.

The general was brought to Walter Reed hospital from Cuba two months ago.

Eager Throng Awaiting Opening of Houghton's Today

Thousands were drawn to the Houghton & Dutton Co. store today by the values advertised for the Greater Houghton Day Sale in twelve pages of advertising in the Boston Evening American. An hour before the doors were opened the doorways and sidewalks around the building were jammed with men and women awaiting the opportunity to take advantage of the many bargains. This photograph shows only a portion of this pre-opening crowd in the main entrance at Beacon and Tremont sts. The throng increased hourly, coming from all parts of Greater Boston and many other sections of New England, some communities sending hundreds of people to the store.

The response was a noteworthy proof of the correctness of Manager Ackerman's judgment in believing that economic conditions in New England are fundamentally sound, and that the people will gladly avail themselves of the opportunity when real values are offered and properly advertised. The sale was in progress from 9 a. m. until 9 o'clock tonight.

HUNNEWELL TO PAY WIFE $300

First victory in the cross suits for divorce filed in Reno by Harry H. Hunnewell of Boston and Chicago, and Mrs. Helen O. Hunnewell of Oak Park, Ill., was won by the wife today.

Hunnewell, who charges cruelty, was ordered to pay his wife $300 a preliminary fee and expenses of $10 a day, pending the outcome of the suits.

The trial was set on June 13, before a jury.

Hunnewell, who married at Indianapolis on March 28, 1931, was declared "mentally incompetent" at Los Angeles in February, 1929, and his mother, Mrs. Bertha Hunnewell, was appointed his guardian.

In the following month he was named in a suit for divorce filed by Charles R. June of Los Angeles against Mrs. Anne June.

Sails for England

Mrs. Andrew W. Mellon, divorced wife of United States ambassador to Court of St. James, who has sailed for England and will be met at Southampton by the ambassador.

EX-WIFE OFF TO REJOIN MELLON

New York, May 7 (INS)—Reports that Mrs. Andrew W. Mellon, divorced wife of the American ambassador to England, is to be reconciled to her former husband gained strength today when it was learned she is on her way to England.

She sailed yesterday on the Milwaukee of the Hamburg American line, and is to be met at Southampton by the ambassador.

Reports that the Mellons would be reconciled followed the recent appointment of the former secretary of the treasury as America's ambassador to England. The couple were divorced 20 years ago in Pittsburgh, when Mellon was 37.

Since taking up his post in London his daughter, Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, has been acting as hostess of the American embassy.

SHAKEDOWN UP TO GRAND JURY

A general investigation, indicating they say, that court attachés and men holding small public office have, in the last six months, molested thousands of dollars from unsuspecting victims who were in real or imaginary trouble with the law.

In most cases, the conspiracy has taken the form of a "fix." The victim is selected. If he is in real trouble he is handled easily. If he isn't in trouble, and is a quibble enough, he is made to believe he faces arrest on some charge.

He is told his case can be "fixed" for so much money, which he gathers together on some charge. Then he is taken on various "blind" journeys and made to wait outside a courtroom, a judge's lobby, a district attorney's office or a police station, while the "fix" is pending to be "fixed" pays a social call, or walks in one door and out another.

VICTIMS CAN AID

State police feel there are many more cases than those which have been brought to the attention of the authorities, but the only way they can get at them is through specific complaint of the victim or someone who knows the details.

These complaints, they believe, will be forthcoming once the Bar Association opens up its plans.

Laymen, runners, ambulance chasers and a dozen other kinds of shysters and law-breakers will be shown up or driven to cover, according to officials.

The arrest of John Palmer, official interpreter of West Roxbury district court, for larceny from Antonio Petrarca of Prospect st., Somerville, represents the outcome of only one of State Detective Joseph Ferraro's investigations.

One case, it was learned, involves a "runner" who is declared to have freed an unemployed citizen of $200 and also to have "trimmed" the lawyer, for whom he was supposed to be working, of $1400.

Palmer is alleged to have obtained $300 from Petrarca by offering to help him get a divorce which never materialized, and $25 for "fixing" a police case which never existed.

CARMEN LINE UP TO BATTLE CUT.

The real battles over the proposed 12 1/2 per cent reduction of pay of Boston's firemen are still to come. President William D. Mahoney of the Amalgamated Firemen's Union of America said today.

He said that the firemen of Detroit to remain until the dispute is settled, and a new agreement reached, indicated it was very likely the firemen will eventually go before an arbitration board.

The firemen met the proposition of the company with a demand for a renewal of the existing agreement, without change of pay or working conditions, at its expiration July 1.

"We have only had preliminary skirmishes thus far," said Mahoney. "The real battles are to come. There have been too many battles, one of the agreement committee with General Manager Dana, the others between Atty. Vahay for the union and myself."

"On Monday we will answer Dana's argument. Up to now we have been only talking the situation over."

"I don't believe the public will be in any way affected if no agreement is reached, because the agreement correct that an arbitration board will settle any differences."

CURLEY HIGH ON OFFICIAL VOTE

Mayor Curley forged ahead, of James Roosevelt, son of New York's Governor, in the official count of the Democratic primaries issued from the secretary of state's office today.

Official figures, while showing that the Smith pledged state won, changed unofficial figures and showed Mayor Curley instead of young Roosevelt top man on the Roosevelt slate of delegates-at-large.

Curley received 64,515 against 53,479 for young Roosevelt. Sen. Walsh, with a total of 153,465 votes, was high man on the Smith pledged slate.

Official returns from the Republican primary showed that former Governor Fuller, with 57,534 votes, led the list of delegates-at-large pledged to the renomination of Hoover.

RUM BOAT SUNK IN FLAMES BY COAST GUARD

Gloucester, May 7—Hailed by Coast Guard machine gun bullets as she slipped through the drizzle and mist, the speedboat C-728, declared to be carrying 600 cases of liquor, burned and sank nine miles off Gloucester early today.

The 45-foot speedboat sloshed beneath the waves in a cloud of hanging steam. Boatwain's Mate Kenneth Webster in charge of the coast guard patrol boat from Base 7, Gloucester, leaped aboard the speedboat with one of his crew and seized several cases of the liquor as evidence.

Before the prisoners two men, giving their names as Frank Williams of Boston and East Boston, and John Alves of Plymouth.

The coast guards ordered the speedboat to halt, and when the order was ignored, Boatwain's Mate Webster opened up on it with a machine gun. The speedboat could not fight, but as the coast guard craft drew up alongside, one of the two men aboard the C-728 ran from the engine room, which immediately burst into flames.

BING CROSBY ON THE JOB

Songs of College Glee Club Gave Bing Crosby Start

By RUTH MOUGLER— "And cuddle in your arms..." Bing Crosby had just left the stage of the Metropolitan Theater, the applause still sounding pleasantly, and like a baseball player off his bat, going to a baseball game he was still humming the strains of his opening number.

A few minutes later, with the grass paint wiped away to reveal a smiling face, he was talking about his "miser"—who was Dede Lee of the movies.

"Oh, yes, indeed she is with me," he laughed, and then whispered, "I'm very much in love with her."

Crosby came to the city yesterday to show himself in person to the thousands who have heard his baritone melodies over the radio, by admiration and fame. He wears natty sport clothes and is very dapper.

And by the way, he is a collegiate. Back in the school days ago he was a football player for Gonzaga College. He also played baseball and was a member of the glee club. And that's where he got his start.

"Oh, I've always enjoyed singing. I always wanted to sing for an audience. In my college days I did that and from there I stepped into amateur theatricals. And, like all such fellows with hopes, I played in bands, did a turn in vaudeville, was taken by Paul Whiteman for his band, and from there on it was sailing along slowly," he explained.

Bing gave the public a style in singing that was different. Then came records, talks, then radio and today he is one of the first ten in his field.

"Where did I get Bing for at name?" he laughed. "Well it was this way. I was christened Harry Lillis Crosby and I am 25 years old. The Bing part of my original name in Tacoma, Wash., where I received my early training. When the other boys and myself would play Indian's in cowboys, I shouted 'bing' louder than the rest of the gang."

"And that is how the nickname came to me and it has stuck to me all these years. My parents wanted me to study law and I did take a try at it. But law and Crosby, I guess, were not to match and I am now singing songs."

After a few more weeks of stage work Crosby will return to Los Angeles and picture making. His latest cinema, "Wild Waves," will be shown in Boston early next fall.

ONE IN $30,000 RUM RAID HELD

Joseph Bonno, 31, of Alton st., Medford, was arrested for the second time in 20 hours today after police uncovered liquor and equipment valued at $3000 in an abandoned bakery in Sumner st., Somerville.

Bonno, who told police he was watchman of the building, was taken by federal agents after he was held for a hearing Wednesday on charges of keeping and exposing liquor for sale.

The agent charged him with illegal manufacture of liquor, while making a search of the third floor, stepped into a hole and fell to the lower floor. He suffered a fracture of the shoulder.

CURTIN MASS ON 2 CONTINENTS

On two continents funeral masses were sung today for Andrew P. Curtin, late cemetery trustee and prominent Medford merchant and manufacturer.

Medford City Hall was closed for the day and practically all business suspended in the city from 9:30 a. m. to 11 a. m. Services took place in St. Joseph's Church.

Meanwhile, in the chapel in Orem, Utah, a service of the Passion Play, services also took place through arrangements by Antone Laing, Jr., son of the man who formerly portrayed the role of Christ in the famous Oberammergau spectacle.

KENTUCKY DERBY 2-1 CHOICE IN KENTUCKY DERBY

SENATOR, FAVORITE, MOUNTS 6 TO 1 SHOTS TO ENDS

Louisville, Ky., May 7 (INS)—Clear and warm weather prevailed early today a few hours before the scheduled running of the Kentucky Derby. The temperature stood at 85 degrees and the sky was cloudless.

This gave fans hope that the government weather bureau's forecast of probable showers would not eventuate and that a fast track will favor the racing thoroughbreds.

By DAMON RUNYON.

Louisville, May 7 (US)—Twenty noble nags, representing what the more romantic minded among the turf followers would call the flower of the Kentucky-derby of America, are in nomination today for the Kentucky Derby this afternoon.

Derby Statistics

Distance—One and a quarter.
Record—2:01.55, made by Twenty Grand, last year.
Favorite—Loma Stable's Tick On.
Second choice—Probably Mrs. John Hay Whitney's entry, Stephen, and Over Time.
Value in winner—If 20 start, $52,324. For each scratch total will be reduced $500.

Weather forecast—Showers in afternoon.
Probable crowd—45,000.
Starting time—About 5 o'clock (Central Standard Time).

Official time—Liberty Limited, Overtime, Our Fancy, Thistle Air, Brendan Mint, Coe Ten, Gallani Sir and Catnip.

Eight ball. It got no on cover or trainer would trust him. He drifted into complete obscurity.

Ensign Came Back at Havana Meeting

After several years of floating about in the backwash of the turf game, Ensign bobbed up in Cuba last winter, as sober as a judge, with a nice little string of horses to have him under complete control.

The latter estate is Colonel Bradley's Ensign, Bunker King and Bunker Joe about equal as second choices at 6 to 1.

Mrs. Kaufman's horse and the Whitney's will undoubtedly draw the bulk of the Eastern play, but the Kentucky hand books love those Bradleys.

One fully finally showed up in the entries today. She is a little thing called Overtime, owned by the Longridge Stable, but she is regarded as a doubtful starter.

The center have until about 45 minutes before the race to announce their candidates, but the assignment of the post positions, Tick On der No. 10, which is favorable enough, will give the Whitney pair good No. 5.

Overtime Likes to Run on Fence

Overtime is strictly a rail runner. That is to say, he likes to get against the fence, and travel along there. In fact, he is so set to the rail no matter where his jockey thinks he ought to go, and it is a good draw for Overtime.

The Whitney's will have a lot of sentimental support, because two of the great veteran riders of the world will be producing their best. The redoubtable Earl Sande, who has won three derbies on Zev, Flying Zephyr and Gallant Fox, will be booting Overtime. Buddy Ensign, who had little boy's attention racing in another era, who has turned out in a mile and a half, will make an effort at a comeback, will be backed by the crowd.

Ensign in his time, was one of the greatest riders the racing game has ever known. He was a champion horseman, and the nags liked to race for him. In the early days, he was claimed with anybody that ever sat in the saddle, and he was always up in the Broadway bright hat, and wound up away back of the line.

Heart-Beats and Hoof Beats—Over the Downs—Today -- By Burris Jenkins, Jr.

U.S. Trackmen at Peak for Olympic Games

Lawson Robertson is the world's foremost Olympic authority. He competed in the Olympic Games of 1904, 1908 and 1920 and trained the American Olympic teams of 1920, 1924 and 1928. He is the head coach of the American Olympic team of 1932. Robertson's articles appear exclusively in the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN.

By LAWSON ROBERTSON

Head Coach of the American Olympic Team

This country is extremely fortunate in the fact that some of the boys have reached top form in this, the Olympic year.

If 1928 had been the time for the games we would not have been so splendidly fortified. It was only during this winter that Ben Eastman, the great 440 and 300 yard man on the Pacific coast, Gene Venke, the miler, Joe McCulley, the steeplechaser, and all the other famous figures of the track, Ensign, Topplin, Frank Nordell, George Spitts and others have achieved record breaking performances.

Venke was a school record breaker in the mile and the 1500 meters.

The experience gained since then has enabled him to break the records for the mile and the 1500 meters.

Joe McCulley has come on along splendidly. If he is beaten it will be in record time.

Joe McCulley was a splendid two mile runner in 1931. But he is better today than ever before.

Others have come along with the group of dazzling stars and perhaps before the Olympics are staged we will have some new winners to thrust at the foreign invaders.

But even if that doesn't happen we will have Venke, Halliwell, Kaufman, Sexton, Topplin, Spitts and McCulley at the peak of form—just when we need them at their best.

Gibbons Tells of Hawaii on Air Tonight

By F. E. F.

Fifteen minutes with Floyd Gibbons is scheduled tonight (WEEI at 11:15) marking the famous "Headline Hunter" first network effort since returning from recent disturbances in and around Shanghai.

TIMELY TALK

His former Hawaii Post editor, Floyd Gibbons, is preparing to return to the Pacific Islands. Of particular importance is the question of a "Hawaii" which is now being discussed by Congress in U. S. Navy Department supervision and control. Gibbons discusses this likelihood from various angles.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Massachusetts department, after a special session program immediately following the Gibbons program, beginning from 11:30 until midnight. The program will feature a lecture and in Mr. Victor John P. Kilduff, it is expected that Gibbons' program will be a great success.

MORE NEWS AND NOTES

Much is made over the fact that a "Hawaii" will be a "Hawaii" from 1933, of an orchestra known as "The South Sea Islanders" directed by Mr. Patricia Henry. It was her worthy ancestor, Patrick Henry, who wrote that memorable, historic utterance about death: "It is better to have this liberty." Patricia of a Virginia line with the head of the Gibbons family. She will for that reason, on her own account, be a "Hawaii" from 1933.

FOOD LECTURES FRIENDS HONOR AT WHITE'S

Dedication of the Kitchen May Fair at R. H. White's will take place Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, when Martha Lee, Boston Evening American household economist, gives the first of a series of daily lectures in the fifth floor auditorium.

Martha Lee's lecture on "Favorite Kitchen Hints" will start off a week of events at R. H. White's and is expected to attract hundreds of followers to her Martha Lee Women's Club, in which 80,000 are enrolled already.

The R. H. White Co. has just installed one of the most up-to-date modern kitchen layouts and has made extensive plans to interest housewives and home owners of New England in new ideas for the kitchen.

Following is a schedule of events for next week:
Monday at 8 p. m. Margaret Fossett, assistant director, home service department, Boston Commonwealth College, on "Thirty Minute Dinners."
Tuesday at 8 p. m. Grace Larson, director, home laundering department, Lever Bros. Cambridge, on "Proper Way to Launder."
Wednesday at 8 p. m. George Rector, of Rector's New York, on "Dish Washing Appeal to the Housewife."
Thursday at 8 p. m. Alice Bradley, director, home laundering department, Lever Bros. Cambridge, on "Evolution of the Home in the Future."
Friday at 8 p. m. and 8 p. m. Elizabeth Wood, of the Ladies' Home Journal, will lecture on subjects of interest to the Junior members of families.

Wednesday at 8 p. m. Alice Bradley, director, home laundering department, Lever Bros. Cambridge, on "Evolution of the Home in the Future."
Friday at 8 p. m. and 8 p. m. Elizabeth Wood, of the Ladies' Home Journal, will lecture on subjects of interest to the Junior members of families.

Barry Tells "Follow Your Heart"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Judith of His Love

"HOW PALE you look!" "Have you been ill? I haven't seen you in so long. I knew you'd been moved into another apartment."

"Yes, the same sort of work. Your coat's all wet. I'll hang it in the bathroom."

He walked into the living room, and Judith had her first moment of reprieve. She had hung up his coat on a peg behind the bathroom door and heard against the wall with him, trembling.

So Barry had come here tonight! Was he going to make an explanation?

But she must keep her pride. Must be as casual to him as to a friend. She told herself Barry had seen how she had lost her beauty.

NOTHING TO HER

She switched on the light, hunted for rings in the cupboard that was set into the wall, she couldn't find any.

"What does it matter how I look? He's nothing to me any more," she told herself, "and I'm nothing to the world."

But he had come! She could hear him moving in the living room upstairs.

With a lift to her head and her shoulders squared, Judith went to him.

"Won't you sit down?" "Come over on the couch. I have a lot to say to you, Judith."

"Yes, I'll sit here. This is a comfortable chair." She sank into it, contriving to smile.

"I'm growing late in my old age." "Old you'll never be. You're the same Judith."

He came over suddenly and stood directly in front of her. She was a queer, bumpy look on his face.

She forced herself to smile again with an assumed brightness.

"And a few moments ago you were staring at me like I was a ghost, and telling me how pale I looked."

He sank down on a padded "pouffe" and with an odd, despairing gesture, buried his face in his hands.

"What's the matter, Barry?" "Nothing, nothing. I'm just tired."

He had nothing to say to her. Judith thought and immediately least to Barry, to whom Barry was engaged.

Her mind flew to those letters of Loranda's she had never opened, that were hidden away at the bottom of her locked trunk.

It was within a hand's reach of where Barry was the trunk, was camouflaged by a Spanish shawl.

BARRY HOMESICK

"I'm a fool. Worse than a fool! I don't deserve you should even speak to me, Judith! I've no business here at all. But I was weak."

And—end—homework for a sign. "You, I had to come."

"Homesick for a sign?" he had heard. "I'm homesick for a sign?" he had heard.

"Barry! You mean—"

She couldn't keep the eager light out of her eyes as on an uncontrollable impulse, she reached out and touched him on the shoulder as he sat with his head buried in his hands.

"I mean it's you—Judith—I didn't realize how much I loved you. Judith—I thought I could go through with this, but for the past several weeks, I've been waiting for you."

He raised his head that was close to hers, and with his handsome and unhappy eyes looked down into hers that were wide with hope, and shock, and joy, and a kind of fear that mingled.

"But—your engagement, Barry?"

"I know! I know! I'm fairly groggy. I've made a hopeless mess of things, and I'm right. I should say, Judith—I'm a weak, foolish, confused fellow. I thought you might help me."

ONE HE LOVES

"Help you to what?" "To you. You're the one I love. I've been a selfish and ambitious fellow, and I'm a failure. As though he were a little boy, and it was up to him to comfort him, Judith slid her arm around the back of his collar.

Before she could stop him, his face was against hers, and the tears of love were pouring from his eyes. . . . and he was madly kissing her.

Silence in the living room of the little flat, broken only by the crash of the rain against the panes, and the subdued sound of the clock.

"Judith, it's spring in here, with you. What a lovely, lovely, lovely you are!"

"It comes from that bunch of lilacs over there on top of the radio, Barry."

"But your hair smells so sweet."

"I washed it last night. I remember now I put some lotion on it. I'm French, and I love to smell good."

"Judith! You're like a flower, with you. You're the prettiest, the loveliest, the most beautiful girl I've ever met. I think it was Jack Ordway."

"You do see him all the time? I heard you did."

"Follow your heart." "An old, blithe bit of advice. Hearty, well-meaned. And it's been taken, while, that advice, millions of times. And young persons, females, have set out also without hearing of it at all, as you know yourself, let out on the wide and abiding sea, that fortuitously lovely, treacherous, divine body of dreams, that 'Foolish Love-and-Marriage,' with nothing much about but, soaring faith, memories of nothing but love from fond relatives, the doll of her little-girlhood, and a longing to meet love, as all her folks did before her, that will not be balked."

When she guides that frailty of shells to buck the world—with her heart—abroad into the beautiful ferry waste, where, rounding every island a girl may expect Prince Charming and his men, and into the grove, where everlasting adventure in the form of THE young man will take her by the hand, she will find Tragedy and Comedy, two portresses, at the gate. And they will be, most usually, no hopelessly interchanged as to face, that through much of her life thereafter she will not always know which of the two will laugh—and she will weep. Even when THE young man stands up well under the assails of Time.

Some demureness, slack, with their dolls and their dreams and their hearts for ships, see Tragedy's face for steady company.

And yet the girls will sail off. Where their hearts go, YOU did, and I did. And we have found only the LAUGHING face so far.

Some cautious maidens shelve the way of the heart and go off leaving it behind, with a good old solid-skip suit with a few diamonds and such sparkle, and MY how a solid-skip suit can go to the bottom!"

The Marry-Go-Round

Women of Today—And Other Women

By HELEN ROWLAND

YOU CAN always tell a girl who has decided to marry a man by the way she changes all at once, as you know yourself, let out on the wide and abiding sea, that fortuitously lovely, treacherous, divine body of dreams, that 'Foolish Love-and-Marriage,' with nothing much about but, soaring faith, memories of nothing but love from fond relatives, the doll of her little-girlhood, and a longing to meet love, as all her folks did before her, that will not be balked."

In these days it seems a pity for a girl to waste so much artistic effort in painting her lips before going to a party. They'll get all crinkled in the taxi, anyhow.

To a man the most interesting thing about a woman is the way she looks when she is in love with him now and then—not the one who remains in love with him all the time.

When a girl looks at her eyes and sighs, it is not always a sign that she is unhappy, but more likely a sign that she is trying to warm over the memory of some man's kiss.

It was not the size of Cinderella's foot, but the size of her brain that won the prince. She was the canny sort of girl who can marry a prince.

Hints From the Beauty Box

PERMANENT wave processes have been so improved that the hard-boiled curling seldom causes the royal toper to lose his hair.

On the safe side, it's a good idea to give the hair a month's conditioning treatment before the frills. Twice a week, at night, rub mineral oil into the scalp, and over the hair shafts. Next morning, remove it by means of a vigorous nubby scrubbing, with sufficient rinsing to carry away every bit of soap.

HOME TREATMENT for the removal of moles is a beautifying attempt, that should be discouraged. The work should be done by a specialist who understands moles and their strange habits.

Freedom for husbands and wives may be all right theoretically, but in practice it's a different story.

Fashion Note

THERE IS A REAL NEED for the outfit that is not too formal or informal for smart evening wear. Such a costume has a skirt done in black stretch chiffon, in double layers, that hangs in godet folds from the hips. There is a long-sleeved overblouse in silver linen with embroidery and edgings in Persian blue and grey.

HAIR BRUSHING can be overdone. Fifty strokes are enough. Don't pounce down hard with the brushes on the little young hairs that are constantly appearing at the sides and temples.

Ptomain Cases Infrequent

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

WHEN FOODS decompose and decay, certain chemical reactions take place and the result is the production of ptomaines. These chemical compounds are called "ptomaines" and are the cause of many cases of food poisoning.

When food is left to rot, it often causes much distress to the body. The bacteria which are formed by putrefaction are called "ptomaines" and are the cause of many cases of food poisoning.

The early conception of ptomaines was that they were poisonous substances developed by germs or bacteria. It has been proved that bacteria do not liberate such poisons. Ptomaines differ in this respect from "toxins" which are produced by bacteria and which are highly detrimental to the body.

Ptomaines are merely decomposition products, and as a rule they are easily handled by the body. They are often harmless and cause little, if any, distress. The ill effects caused by ptomaines are usually of short duration and disappear when the poisons are removed from the system.

According to the way bacteria, a gauger demands only your money or your life, but a woman always wants both.

Ptomain poisoning is a term that was frequently used some years ago. It was applied to the suffering from any severe gastro-intestinal ailment, and the symptoms were laid to ptomain poisoning. For many years the term was loosely used by both the medical profession and the lay public.

In recent days we hear little of "ptomain poisoning," and the expression is disappearing from scientific literature. One well versed in the study of toxins and poisons rarely refers to ptomain poisoning. In the light of present knowledge the term should not be used.

One of the most common results in the formation of ptomaines is caused by the neglect in hygiene and care of the health. I always advise the drinking of at least eight glasses of water each day. When you drink less than this, you are poisoning your skin and kidneys, whatever the cause of the trouble in your body.

Tips on Cooking Asparagus

Season Now for the Lucious Stalks

By MARTHA LEE

ASPARAGUS is certainly a runner-up on apples in helping to keep the body in shape. It is the time to make the most of this delicious vegetable. One can get it in the market all year long, but the stalks of the garden that bordered on the salt marsh, and eat an apricot of the fresh green.

But I do possess a friend out North Sudbury way, whose "gentleman farmer" husband raises what looks like oceans of asparagus. I always thought of her as a lady of leisure until I saw her in the market.

Spring, asparagus waits for no man, once it starts to grow, and it grows fast. It is ready to be harvested in the early part of the season, and it is the time to make the most of this delicious vegetable.

Daily True Story

In the Subway

PEGGY got into the Park at subway, weary from toes to togs. She found a seat in a far corner and squeezed in between a solid man with a red mustache, who looked like a butcher, and a rather pale young man with eyeglasses who tried to compress himself still more to give her room.

As Peggy sat down, she noticed something colorful on the floor and picked it up. It was a crumpled tulip, with stem broken with the petals bruised. Peggy bent over and the wounded flower in her palm as though it were a wounded bird. And she smiled as she gazed at it, thinking what a brave blossom it must have been as it stood erect among its brethren in a full glowing bed.

The man with the red mustache watched her with a cynical grin. The young man beside her also watched.

At the next stop the big man got out. The young man doctored, cleared his throat, seemed about to speak, but did not. They had passed through Park before the young man mustered enough courage to speak.

"You had better," "to see a flower tramped like that." Peggy gazed at him, startled from her dreaming.

"Yes, she said diffidently. 'You love flowers?'"

"No, no. I. You'll pardon me for speaking a perfect stranger—but I have asked among them. My dad's a florist. They seem to me—like little people, say little people who 'manipulate' me. I hate to see them fade, die, but perhaps you'll think I'm a rank sentimentalist."

Peggy smiled kindly, touched by his reference to "little people."

She was nearing her station. She was getting her bag, a package, and her paper together for departure.

"But—" began the young man hesitantly, "you—you would let me send you a living flower, a petal, one of the 'little people'?"

"You could keep it on a window sill, you know. They're cheerful to have about. Somehow, I think they give you courage, hope, when the sun does not shine."

"You would be lovely," answered finally, after her enthusiasm was real.

She took a leaf from a tiny notebook, wrote her name and address, and slipped it into a pocket for a card.

"Respectfully," "You haven't answered my question," persisted Mrs. Winton. "Why not? They're cheerful to have about. Somehow, I think they give you courage, hope, when the sun does not shine."

Wounded Pride or Love? Asks

Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is love with a boy a little older than I am. We have been going together for about six months. He comes in my house about once a week but lately he's got in with very bad company who have influenced him to lose his flat. These girls have won their prizes in a Police review. Please tell me how I can win back my un-do-it-to-be friend, as they very much annoy me.

NO LONGER CHERFUL.
